ACCOUNTING MALPRACTICE

Overview

To the uninitiated, professional accounting may be a confusing mix of abstract terminology, detailed professional standards, complex financial instruments, and thorny problems that require judgment.

Our Accountant Liability defense team provides the steady guidance and skilled advocacy that accountants, auditors, and financial professionals rely on to protect their professional standing. We understand how professional, regulatory, ethical, and legal issues overlap.

We also know that more than just accounting standards, financial statements, and numbers are involved when your professional reputation is at stake. We have practical experience in successfully navigating claims involving accounting professionals and complex accounting and financial reporting issues.

From audit disputes to tax matters, we guide each case with care and clear communication, helping you resolve challenges and move forward with confidence. Our history of working with accounting professionals has provided us with deep experience in audit planning, independence and disclosure issues, the intricacies of dealing with management and board audit committee perspectives, and forensic fraud work. Our attorneys know how to cut through complex accounting principles, levels of service, legal and ethical standards, and regulatory requirements to achieve the strongest possible results—whether through early resolution, trial success, or disciplined negotiation with insurers, clients, and regulators.

Beyond resolving disputes, we also help accountants limit risk before problems start. We advise firms on engagement letters, client communications and privilege issues, and compliance matters to help prevent claims down the road. We also advise firms on internal contractual matters with accounting professionals and practice governance.

From the first call to the final resolution, our goal is to help you resolve challenges and move forward with confidence.
