

Overview

The defense of dental malpractice claims is a niche practice that demands the skill and expertise of a defense trial lawyer trained in malpractice work and an in-depth understanding of the substantive nature of dental care.

Our passion for the defense of dental practitioners is based solidly on our proven record of success in taking dental cases to verdict when that is the selected course. In partnership with both the practitioner and the carrier, our extraordinary ability to recognize key dental issues early helps to hone in on potential strategic recommendations needed to plan the course of the case. These are not medical malpractice cases on a smaller scale, but rather are specialized cases that demand specialized expertise on their unique issues. Our clients benefit from our extensive and significant experience in decades of defending dental negligence and related claims.

Our experience goes beyond the traditional dental malpractice claim. We handle a variety of related matters, from defense of a license to education on risk management. Given our well-developed network within both the dental malpractice legal community as well as the dental community, we also have the ability to assist our clients with many and varied legal needs.
