Christin E. Doyle focuses her practice on estate planning and probate. She is passionate about helping individuals and families create thoughtful estate plans that protect their loved ones, preserve their legacy, and provide peace of mind.

In addition, she serves as a volunteer attorney with the Washington University School of Law Estate Planning Clinic, where she supervises law students and assists low-income Missouri residents with the preparation of essential estate planning documents. Through this work, she enjoys mentoring future attorneys while helping families obtain quality legal services they might not otherwise be able to afford.

She's also gained valuable experience reviewing sophisticated estate plans for ultra-high-net-worth families and coordinated with clients and estate planning counsel to implement complex estate planning strategies. Through this work at a multi-family office, she developed an awareness of advanced planning techniques and the importance of integrating estate planning with a client's overall financial goals.

Before concentrating her practice on estate planning, Ms. Doyle represented physicians, hospitals, healthcare providers, and other professionals in medical malpractice litigation. Her litigation experience gives her a practical perspective when counseling clients, allowing her to identify potential issues and develop comprehensive planning solutions designed to minimize future disputes.

Outside of her legal practice, she enjoys spending time with her husband, Kaleb, their two lively little boys, and their goldendoodle, Truman. She is active in her church, and enjoys painting, reading, cooking, and cheering on Mizzou at sporting events.
