Amanda Mueller's goal as an attorney is to assist people and businesses in protecting themselves during the litigation process by helping them navigate what can sometimes be stressful and unfamiliar territory. Clients are offered potential courses of action that range from aggressive to pragmatic, depending on their needs, and each option is carefully discussed and approached in a manner that ensures they fully understand the issues at hand. Her trademark candor and frank assessment of the options and solutions available in each individual's circumstance are key to her success in resolving legal conflicts and generating trust between lawyer and client. Her clients are assured they are an integral part of the defense team and decision-making process.

Specifically, she focuses her practice on cases involving:

- premises liability
- personal injury
- schools/religious institutions dealing with sexual abuse and clergy misconduct claims
- third-party criminal acts
- business litigation

Ms. Mueller has represented clients throughout Missouri as well as those located in Illinois, Iowa, Ohio, Connecticut, New York, Tennessee, and Nevada. By winning summary judgments and dismissals on behalf of defendants in abuse claims, commercial litigation matters, and discrimination cases, she has firmly established herself as an aggressive and detail-oriented advocate.

She also believes her goals match those of HeplerBroom LLC: being committed to providing quality legal services that are responsive, innovative, and efficient. If your legal needs aren't consistent with her skills and experience, she can serve as liaison to one of the firm's nearly 100 experienced trial, estate planning, and business and corporate attorneys who will be a perfect match.
